

Examples of Extenuating Circumstances and Supporting Documentation

Unusual circumstances may occur which impact a student's ability to be successful during an enrollment period. Situations like struggling in a course or withdrawing to change majors are part of regular academic activity and are not considered extenuating.

Examples of extenuating circumstances include, but are not limited to:

Circumstance	Supporting Documentation	Proof of Improvement
Divorce or Separation	Court documentation	Divorce Decree
Natural Disaster	Insurance Claim
Incarceration	Court documentation	Release Notice
Mental Health	Applicable medical history	Letter from physician/therapist/counselor showing issue is regulated or resolved
Physical Health	Applicable medical history	Letter from physician showing issue is regulated or resolved
Loss of Housing	Eviction notice	Current lease/mortgage
Death	Death Certificate or obituary linking you to the deceased
