The National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE) and International Reading Association collectively suggest the following standards to define what P-12 students should know about language and be able to do with language. The joint goal of the NCTE and IRA “is to define, as clearly and specifically as possible, the current consensus among literacy teachers and researchers about what students should learn in the English language arts—reading, writing, listening, speaking, viewing, and visually representing. The ultimate purpose of these standards is to ensure that all students are offered the opportunities, the encouragement, and the vision to develop the language skills they need to pursue life's goals, including personal enrichment and participation as informed members of our society.”

1. Students read a wide range of print and non-print texts to build an understanding of texts, of themselves, and of the cultures of the United States and the world; to acquire new information; to respond to the needs and demands of society and the workplace; and for personal fulfillment. Among these texts are fiction and nonfiction, classic and contemporary works.
2. Students read a wide range of literature from many periods in many genres to build an understanding of the many dimensions (e.g., philosophical, ethical, aesthetic) of human experience.
3. Students apply a wide range of strategies to comprehend, interpret, evaluate, and appreciate texts. They draw on their prior experience, their interactions with other readers and writers, their knowledge of word meaning and of other texts, their word identification strategies, and their understanding of textual features (e.g., sound-letter correspondence, sentence structure, context, graphics).
4. Students adjust their use of spoken, written, and visual language (e.g., conventions, style, vocabulary) to communicate effectively with a variety of audiences and for different purposes.
5. Students employ a wide range of strategies as they write and use different writing process elements appropriately to communicate with different audiences for a variety of purposes.
6. Students apply knowledge of language structure, language conventions (e.g., spelling and punctuation), media techniques, figurative language, and genre to create, critique, and discuss print and non-print texts.
7. Students conduct research on issues and interests by generating ideas and questions, and by posing problems. They gather, evaluate, and synthesize data from a variety of sources (e.g., print and non-print texts, artifacts, people) to communicate their discoveries in ways that suit their purpose and audience.
8. Students use a variety of technological and information resources (e.g., libraries, databases, computer networks, video) to gather and synthesize information and to create and communicate knowledge.
9. Students develop an understanding of and respect for diversity in language use, patterns, and dialects across cultures, ethnic groups, geographic regions, and social roles.
10. Students whose first language is not English make use of their first language to develop competency in the English language arts and to develop understanding of content across the curriculum.
11. Students participate as knowledgeable, reflective, creative, and critical members of a variety of literacy communities.
12. Students use spoken, written, and visual language to accomplish their own purposes (e.g., for learning, enjoyment, persuasion, and the exchange of information).

In addition to developing our candidates' understanding of the above standards, the Secondary English Education program at Shepherd University seeks to help prepare students to live and teach in a complex, technological, and diverse world by introducing them to varying perspectives offered by a thorough study of literature and language. Through these perspectives, sociological and personal barriers may be broken down, and the possibilities as well as the paradoxes of human existence may be better understood and taught. The primary objectives of the program include the following:

1. To encourage Secondary Education majors with a concentration in the English Education Teaching Field to think critically and to communicate their thoughts effectively by helping them develop the skills necessary to understand and utilize the English language;
2. To contribute to the liberal arts education of these majors by exposing them to the diversity and richness of the world's best literature;
3. To prepare Secondary Education majors with a concentration in the English Education Teaching Field to become reflective problem solvers, capable of teaching English on the middle or secondary levels, in a country as ethnically diverse as ours; and
4. To give these majors a knowledge of the basic tools of effective written communication, technology, and an understanding of literature that will enable them to pursue any vocation and function in a diverse and global work world.

Revised Fall 2022

Secondary Education: English Specialization

Required Courses from the Core

- ENGL 215 - The Art of Literature (3 cr) This course explores the art of literature, specifically how a deeper understanding of form, genre, and style enhances our appreciation of literature and language and our understanding of artistic theory/aesthetics. Through a careful study of literature, students will understand the creative thinking of great writers and sharpen their own creative thinking skills.
- COMM 202 - Fundamentals of Speech (3 cr) A required course for all students with focus upon the skills of sending and receiving clear messages. Audience analysis, the organization of the message, listening awareness, and the management of communication apprehension are foremost among the course objectives. Students participate in communication exercises and deliver a variety of speeches of different formats.

English Language Arts Specialization Course Requirements

- ENGL 270 - Traditional Grammar and Standard English Usage (3 cr) This course will focus primarily on the study of traditional grammar and English structures (parts of speech, phrases, and clauses), noting additionally the practical application of standard English usage as apparent in publication and print. Prereq: ENGL 101.
- ENGL 301 - Introduction to Literary Study (3 cr) This course introduces English majors to the discourse, practices, and protocols associated with the study of literature. Emphasis is placed on writing, research, and critical theory (including but not limited to feminism/gender theory, psychoanalysis, deconstruction, New Historicism, and postcolonial theory). The course is the gateway to all English classes above the sophomore-level surveys and must be completed with a C or higher before taking any upper-division classes in the major. Prerequisites: Successful completion of ENGL 101 (Written English) and ENGL 102.
- ENGL 307 - Young Adult Literature (3 cr) This course introduces students to young adult literature. With an emphasis on pedagogy, students will read texts reflecting varying backgrounds and subject matters, including writers and characters reflecting diversity of nationalities, races, ethnicities, classes, and genders. Previously titled Teaching Reading and Young Adult Literature. Prerequisites: ENGL 301 or permission of instructor.
- ENGL 377 - Peer Tutoring and Composition Theory (3 cr) The course will provide a solid theoretical foundation in composition in order to enable students to improve their own writing as well as that of their peers. Students will receive practice in reading, commenting on, and assessing written work from many disciplines. Prerequisites: ENGL 301 or permission of instructor.
- ENGL 421 - Shakespeare (3 cr) A study of selected plays and the sonnets. Minor emphasis on Shakespeare's biography and Elizabethan background. Prerequisites: ENGL 301 or permission of instructor.
