Presentation on Micro-credentialing from Dr. DeRochi

Dr. DeRochi presented to the C&I Committee on micro-credentialing in higher education and West Virginia's plan to expand micro-credential opportunities at four-year institutions. He emphasized the importance of the committee's input on the appropriate faculty governance structure for the proposal and approval of micro-credentials, as well as on strategies to streamline the proposal and review process. Dr. DeRochi also expressed a preference for a minimum of six credit hours for a micro-credential, noting that this criterion will continue to be discussed as the University further defines its approach to micro-credentials.
