IV. Updates/Progress on Senate Actions/Discussions

A. Faculty workload guidelines (Senator Daily)

Discussion continues among colleges and departments regarding the proposed draft of faculty workload guidelines, particularly how to quantify workload percentages. Senator Daily reminded Senators that the proposal is intended as a general framework to be adapted by individual departments based on their unique needs.

Ongoing concerns were expressed about the terminology used to define teaching load, specifically the distinction between contact hours and credit hours. Departments are encouraged to clarify these terms within their contexts to ensure consistency and transparency. Senator Cline made a motion to send current proposal to the provost with the comments. Seconded and motion carried.

B. Updates from the Great Colleges to Work For Committee (Senator Daily)

- a. No changes since the last Senate meeting but they continue to have active discussions.

C. Committee representation: Three committees have been removed based on the recommendations of the subcommittee (Threat Task Force, Internationalization advisory council and Washington Gateway). The Senate discussed the initial report and emphasized the importance of allowing each individual committee to review the recommendations prior to making a final decision on whether to dissolve or maintain the committees. Committees will be asked to submit suggestions and or comments to the Senate by December 1, 2025.

V. New Business

A. Senator Daily discussed the proposal for a new Master's in Counseling program that was presented and brought to a vote at the Graduate Council meeting. Concerns were expressed regarding the expedited nature of the approval process and whether the proposed program should also undergo review through the Curriculum and Instruction (C&I) Committee. It was noted that the approval process for graduate programs differs from that of undergraduate programs, prompting further discussion about the need for procedural alignment. Senators are asked to discuss the issue with their constituents.

VI. Announcements

Faculty Research Forum (Senator Showen) The newly developed committee is working to rekindle the Faculty Research Forum.
